

NOTES NURSE'S PAGE

● symbol indicates annotation

All information is input in a long-form scroll page, except for editing current/past health and adding family history data.

Information about the patient from database appears here.

Input fields from measurements. If an invalid entry, field turns red after "submit" button is pressed.

If the "x" button is selected, the "date quit" field appears in place of the drop down menu.

Both "add health information" and the arrow redirect to the "add/edit health information" page where the information can be updated.

Check boxes are manually pressed or automatically selected after all fields are filled in. This is meant to help the nurse see which topics are covered and to prevent forgetting anything.

All of the boxes must be checked, even if there are no input fields, in order to submit.

Both "add family member" and the arrow redirect to the "add/edit family member" page where the information can be updated.

Immunizations page is run by database, organized by date and if it's required.

Form validation indicated after "submit" is pressed.

Submit button redirects to the condensed information sheet that would be used by the physician.

FINISH

Physician has the option to return to the nurse page where he/she may edit any field and update it.

Information about the patient including the updated nurse input and any changes are automatically calculated.

Input information from the nurse page is consolidated and displayed here.

Any new information is displayed here, along with existing health conditions. The arrow still brings the user to the edit page.

"Finish" button closes the session and saves all changes in the patient's database.

NOTES

This page serves as a way to both view/edit details about existing health entries and add new patient health entries. If the “condition” or “date diagnosed” field is entered incorrectly, the user will be given a warning. However, “notes” and “prescription” can be left blank.

The submit button saves and updates the entry and redirects the user to the nurse data entry page
